

Hollywood is not reality!

The Actor Don Cheadle gave a great performance and the movie Hotel Rwanda gave the world a broadly accurate portrayal of the 1994 genocide.

BUT

Hollywood is not reality, and the real Paul Rusesabagina is not the man in the movie.

Conferences at Emory, including past State of Race events, welcomed panels of speakers who represented opposing and differing views. This is in keeping with university tradition of transparency, accountability, and evidence-based education.

That's NOT what you're likely to see tonight

- No one else may present a DIFFERENT VIEW during this event
- NO OPEN Q&A: questions must be submitted in writing
 - No filming

Many of your fellow Emory faculty and students who have spent years working in Rwanda--before, during, and after the genocide--disagree with some of Mr. Rusesabagina's recent statements and protest the format of tonight's production.

Join us for a BALANCED DISCUSSION ABOUT RWANDA
follow-up event in November

Featuring Ambassador Andrew Young

planned speakers and panelists include:

Ambassador of Rwanda to the USA - James Kimonyo

Genocide survivors from the Milles Collines Hotel

Emory students and faculty who work in Rwanda

Emory faculty in African Studies, Medicine, Public Health, Law, and Business

Georgia State faculty in the Andrew Young School of Policy Studies, International Studies Program

Sponsored by the Rollins School of Public Health at Emory
